Twelve slain at U.S. army base

SHOOTINGS An Army psychiatrist set to be shipped overseas allegedly opened fire at the Fort Hood, Texas, Army post Thursday, authorities said, a rampage that killed 12 people and left 31 wounded in the worst mass shooting ever at a military base in the United States.

The suspect, first said to have been killed, was wounded but alive and in stable condition under military guard, said Lt. Gen. Bob Cone at Fort Hood. "I would say his death is not imminent," Cone said. Col. Ben Danner said the suspect was shot at least four times.

The man was identified as Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan, a 39-year-old, eight-year veteran from Virginia.

Public indifferent to Lansdowne, many say 'just do it': Report

TIM WIECLAWSKI
tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

Half of the residents in Ottawa aren't worried about what happens to Lansdowne Park, as long as it happens quickly, according to a report on the public consultations compiled by Nanos Research.

The results of the feedback from the six open house meetings, focus groups, submissions to OttawaTalks and a survey of 1,000 random residents revealed that 49.6 per cent of residents are neutral when it comes to the Lansdowne Partnership Plan, while 22.5 per cent were against it, 18.7 per cent were in favour of the plan and 9.1 per cent were unsure.

Anyone who was looking to the survey to make their decision was not going to find it, said Nik Nanos, president and CEO of Nanos Research. "You can't make decisions by polls. That's an abdication of leadership," he said. "What you want to do is find out how comfortable and uncomfortable people are with different elements and based on that comfort, figure out how to piece this thing together."

In a separate question about the timing of the project, 53 per cent of respondents stated it was time to move on. Twenty-three per cent provided the same unprompted comment, "just do it."

"There is nothing on here that would be troubling or send us back to the drawing board."
Jeff Hunt, Ottawa 67's owner

However, Nanos warned that should not be interpreted as an endorsement for the plan.

The survey asked people to rate the concept components of the plan on a scale of one to 10.

Green space scored highest with a score of 7.51 followed closely by a farmers' market with 7.48. There was mild support for underground parking (6.91), renovating the civic centre (6.66), an open-air football stadium (6.62), and renovating Frank Clair stadium (5.88). A hotel (4.63), a movie theatre (4.71) and office space (4.74) received failing grades.

"A hotel and a commercial office building is not something that people are going to get emotional about," said Ottawa 67's owner and member of the Ottawa Sports and Entertainment Group Jeff Hunt. "There is nothing on here that would be troubling or send us back to the drawing board."

Push is on to vaccinate pregnant women

tracey.tong@metronews.ca

Now that they have the non-adjuvanted vaccine, Ottawa Public Health is working with hospitals to ensure that pregnant women have rapid access to it.

A vaccination clinic focusing on pregnant women will be set up at the Riverside Campus of the Ottawa Hospital from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, said Ottawa medical officer of health Dr. Isra Levy.

Sixty vaccinators will be on hand to deliver both the adjuvanted and non-adjuvanted vaccine to pregnant women.

"Of course we're hoping enough supply will be available for everyone who wants it, but by our best estimates, that will be the case this Saturday," Levy said.

The city received 5,500 doses of the non-adjuvanted vaccine earlier this week and began administering them Thursday.

Levy estimated there are approximately 7,000 pregnant women in Ottawa at the moment.

"Many of those have already been vaccinated and we know unfortunately some of those don't want to be vaccinated, so the number of pregnant women in Ottawa who still need to be vaccinated is between 3,000 and 5,000," Levy said.

The Ottawa Hospital is seeing increased numbers of patients with H1N1, said hospital president and CEO Dr. Jack Kitts. "It's now impacting on elective surgery because it's the only place we have the option to increase capacity ... It's not something we take lightly."

Exhibit explores wonder of water

Canada's range shown in five environments

TRACEY TONG
tracey.tong@metronews.ca

About 350 metres below the surface of the St. Lawrence River live hundreds of species, including burrowing shrimp, mud stars, brittle stars and worms.

Most people wouldn't give those little guys a second thought. Yet, according to Dr. Jean-Marc Gagnon, collection manager of the invertebrate section of the Canadian Museum of Nature, they're an important part of the water they live in.

Estuaries like the St. Lawrence are just one of five types of aquatic places — others are lakes, rivers, oceans and wetlands — explored in Canada's Waterscapes, a new exhibit opening at the Canadian Museum of Nature Friday.

"This is an exhibition about the remarkable range of water environments that are here in Canada," said Monty Reid, the museum's manager of exhibition services.

"We talk about five separate environments across the country from the Squamish River to the Quill Lakes in Saskatchewan to the East Coast. And we talk about the wonderful animals and plants that live there."

Canada has the longest coastline in the world, said Reid. "We have more water resources in the country than anywhere else in the world. Life came out of the water and we're still tied to it.

"It's a subject that's at the top of people's minds — the stewardship of water and the safety and cleanliness of the water supply. It's a big issue."

Still, the exhibit is "not a heavy-handed exhibit" about conservation, said Reid. It's got a little something for everyone, including models, specimens and kid-friendly activities that will put visitors face to face with a whooping crane and its chicks, more than a dozen species of frogs, a trout, Gagnon's burrowing shrimp, and a yet-unnamed species of sea worm that Gagnon has discovered.

Although he wants people to appreciate the wonder of the water that we've got, there's an underlying message, Reid said.

"We need to take care of it."

Students rally against high costs of tuition

TIM WIECLAWSKI
tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

Right now, the student debt in all of Canada is over $13 billion and students in Ontario are carrying the largest chunk of that, organizers of the Provincial Day of Action to Drop Tuition Fees said Thursday.

"We want to say with a clear voice that students are sick of high tuition costs," said Erik Halliwell, president of the Carleton University Students Association. "Students can't afford to attend college or university anymore in Ontario because Dalton McGuinty has turned his back on students and their families."

Hundreds of students marched through downtown Ottawa to call on the provincial government to develop a new formula for funding colleges and universities that would make tuition more affordable. Simultaneous rallies were held in a dozen other cities across the province.

"I am walking to work against an impoverished Ontario due to student debt," said Carleton student Ayeila Daneshmend. "Education should be a right for everyone. Availability should not be based on money. It should be open to whoever wants to learn."

Market crying foul

Glebe store fears Lansdowne plan competition

The Glebe Meat Market has been operating at the corner of Bank and Regent streets for around 90 years, but owner Stephane Sauve is predicting that the proposed supermarket at Lansdowne Park will drive him out of business.

Sauve is upset with the prospect that the proposed competition will be effectively subsidized by the city and have a big advantage when it comes to parking.

"They are getting the lease on the land for free," he said Thursday. "I don't believe that we are going to survive this. It's going to be too difficult."

With only a week before city council is set to debate the issue, Glebe merchants have launched a campaign to have the Lansdowne Partnership Plan rejected.

They have set up a website, stoplansdownemall.ca, to promote their position.

Glebe BIA executive director Catherine Lindquist said the campaign is not anti-development, but she said the proposed plan is too large for the area.

TIM WIECLAWSKI/METRO OTTAWA

Glebe Meat Market owner Stephane Sauve is afraid a supermarket will force him out of business. The meat market has been operating around 90 years at the corner of Bank and Regent streets.

"We can sustain between 60,000 to 100,000 square feet. What's being proposed at one place in the Glebe is 300,000," she said.

A report from Tate Economic Research for the Ottawa Sports and Entertainment Group concluded businesses were not at risk from the development and that some would benefit from the increased traffic.

Gun registry staff hid information: Van Loan

POLITICS Public Safety Minister Peter Van Loan, under fire for sitting on a 2008 RCMP report on the Canadian firearms program, suggested staff at the national firearms registry are deliberately hiding information in order to ensure the registry's survival.

Van Loan's stunning claim came on a day when another RCMP report — part of the government-wide annual performance reports — showed the firearms registry of the Canadian gun control program is costing less and being used more than ever by police. Numbers are now the new weapon as the battle begins anew over the future of the long-gun registry. The RCMP — responsible for administering the overall gun control program — published its annual performance report that shows operations of the registry are being streamlined. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Tory ridings cash in: Analysis

Study shows largest stimulus chunks also hit cities, coveted seat

The biggest winners of the Conservatives' stimulus extravaganza include one of the prime minister's closest friends, a riding the Tories desperately hope to win in a byelection next week, and a longtime party stalwart.

Eastern Ontario MP Scott Reid, the Nova Scotia riding of Cumberland-Colchester-Musquodoboit Valley and British Columbia MP Jim Abbott are three of the clearest winners in the distribution of stimulus spending, a broad analysis by The Canadian Press shows.

Several urban cores also fare well. Downtown Ottawa, in a riding held by the NDP, is a top scorer, along with Downtown Vancouver, (Liberals), and Winnipeg Centre, (NDP).

Drawing on the underlying data that supports an interactive online map displaying budget announcements, the analysis counted, located and evaluated 4,833 projects announced across the country as of Oct. 25. Each project was assigned a riding. The map does not include dollar figures, so each project was also assigned a score, according to whether the government said it was small (under $100,000), medium (between $100,000 and $1 million), large (between $1 million and $5 million) or extra-large (over $5 million).

The results show that Conservatives come out on top in most provinces, although occasional opposition ridings do well, too. In British Columbia, Conservatives win seven of the top 10 rankings. Ditto for Ontario. In New Brunswick, three of the top four scores go to Tories. Even in Quebec, Conservatives punch above their weight.

Government largesse also struck Cumberland-Colchester-Musquodoboit Valley, a riding currently held by Independent MP Bill Casey, which the Tories have high hopes of winning back in a byelection set for Monday. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Link to, don't host reports: Auditor

ONLINE The office of Canada's auditor general says it's perfectly OK — and much appreciated — if websites link to reports on its government site, but warns they should not be hosted elsewhere.

Advocates for copyright reform expressed concern Thursday when the auditor general's office demanded the Globe and Mail newspaper remove a copy of a report that had been attached to one of its online articles. The Globe was displaying the report with a web application called Scribd, which allows large documents to be embedded on a web page without the need for an external program. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gatti fortune fight set for long haul

COURTS The widow of late boxing champion Arturo Gatti has been awarded $40,000 to cover legal fees and child-care costs, but her fight with his family over his sizable fortune looks set to go the distance.

The sum falls far short of the $150,000 advance that Amanda Rodrigues was seeking from Gatti's estate.

And in another blow to the 23-year-old Brazilian native, Superior Court Justice Paul Chaput concluded in his ruling Thursday that custody of the couple's dog is not an urgent matter for the time being.

Chaput awarded Rodrigues $30,000 to cover legal fees and $10,000 in eventual child-care costs for their son, Arturo Jr.

Amanda Rodrigues, Arturo Gatti and Arturo Gatti Jr.

But the stakes in the bitter dispute are way higher — as in $6 milion, the estimated worth of Gatti's estate.

The former world champion, who was born in Italy and raised in Montreal, was found dead under mysterious circumstances at a posh Brazilian seaside resort last July 11. THE CANADIAN PRESS

H1N1 IMMUNIZATION CAMPAIGN:

Our Plan for Canadians

Dr. David Butler-Jones, Chief Public Health Officer of Canada

Public Health Agency of Canada | Agence de la santé publique du Canada

Canada

November 2009

Office of the Chief Public Health Officer of Canada
Public Health Agency of Canada
1 800 O-Canada
www.fightflu.ca

Fellow Canadians:

Sometimes, finding the facts you need to protect yourself and your family from the H1N1 flu virus isn't easy. There are a lot of people giving advice right now.

As the Chief Public Health Officer of Canada and a doctor, I am writing to provide you with the facts about the H1N1 immunization campaign underway across the country.

Our plan for Canadians

We're in the midst of the largest and quickest mass immunization campaign in Canadian history. In fact, next week more than 8,500,000 doses of the H1N1 flu vaccine will have been delivered to provinces and territories.

Immunizing millions of people must be done in phases. As much as I wish we could vaccinate everybody all at once, that's just not realistic. This is why public health officials have identified priority groups who need to be vaccinated first. Among them are:

- People under 65 years of age with chronic health conditions
- Pregnant women
- Children 6 months to under 5 years of age
- People living in remote and isolated settings or communities
- Health care workers responding to the H1N1 pandemic or delivering essential health care services
- Caregivers or close household contacts of persons who cannot be vaccinated or who may not respond to the vaccine

Once the priority groups are vaccinated, immunization will begin for the rest of the population with a goal of vaccinating every Canadian who wishes to be vaccinated in the weeks to come.

A phased rollout of the vaccine helps protect everyone — the more Canadians who get vaccinated, the better we are all protected against the H1N1 flu virus.

You can be confident that there will be vaccine available when your turn comes. In fact, Canada is one of the few countries in the world to make enough vaccine available for all its citizens.

I can't emphasize enough that getting vaccinated is a safe and effective way to protect yourself and others against the H1N1 flu virus. Consult your local health authorities or the contact information below to learn more.

Yours sincerely,

David Butler-Jones

Swine flu's on a roll

More deaths, more hospitalizations in Canada-wide surge

Flu Outbreak

Swine flu is surging across the country.

Canada's chief public health officer says hospitalizations, intensive-care unit admissions and deaths from the H1N1 influenza virus (also known as swine flu) are three times higher this week than last.

Dr. David Butler-Jones say the western provinces, the territories and Newfoundland and Labrador have been hit hard.

"We expect to hear of more illness and deaths in the coming weeks as we go further into the second wave," Butler-Jones said.

Butler-Jones says overall flu activity is still below its peak during the virus' first wave in June.

But he expects to surpass that spring high point within a few weeks.

"As of last week, we were below the peak weeks of June," he said.

"Now we're catching up.

"So we're not quite there yet, but over the next few weeks we're going to see perhaps what we saw in June."

Millions of Canadians have received the swine-flu shot since it was approved last month.

Delivery of the vaccine slowed after drug-maker-GlaxoSmithKline was asked to make special batches for pregnant women.

Public health officials say, as of Nov. 3 nationally, swine flu had killed 101 people.

More than 1,700 people have been hospitalized since the virus appeared in April.

By comparison, they say the common flu sends about 20,000 Canadians to hospital each year.

Between 4,000 and 8,000 Canadians die of influenza annually.

The Ontario toll

- Ontario health officials say 37 people have died and 123 people have been hospitalized with H1N1, up from 108 on Wednesday.
- Sixty-five of those patients are in intensive care, which is "very low," said Dr. Arlene King, Ontario's chief medical officer of health.

Bloc fights with bullets, blood

WEAPONS CONTROL The Bloc Québécois is leaping on the gun-control debate, casting its opponents as spineless in allowing the federal firearms registry to die.

The party is fighting with a fiery new ad campaign in one Montreal riding where a byelection is set for next week.

Blood-oozing, bullet-riddled posters suggest the pan-Canadian parties are one and the same when it comes to gun control.

The backlash comes after the entire Conservative caucus, 12 New Democrats and eight Liberals voted to scrap the billion-dollar long-gun registry.

Meanwhile, the provincial Parti Québécois wants the province to take over responsibility for its portion of the long-gun registry.

Olympic torch relay sparks claims of Tory bias

GAMES The Olympic torch relay has sparked protests from the Liberals and NDP, who say residents of ridings held by the Harper Conservatives will have a much better chance of taking part in the celebrations.

As it travels across Ontario from Dec. 11 to Jan. 4, the torch will make pit stops at events in 29 Conservative-held ridings, seven NDP-held ridings and three ridings held by the Liberals.

According to plans released by federal Sports Minister Gary Lunn, the torch will manage to hit nearly three-fifths of the 51 Conservative-held ridings in Ontario.

The Liberals and NDP are up in arms, saying the heavy weighting of celebrations in Conservative ridings couldn't be a coincidence.

It's a pattern that is repeated nationally.

Crown wants life for sex attack

CRIME The Crown says it wants a life sentence for a central Alberta man who posed as a police officer when he kidnapped and sexually assaulted a 16-year-old girl.

Gerard Baumgarte pleaded guilty this week to six charges stemming from the February attack.

A judge has ordered a new psychiatric examination of Baumgarte, 57.

The girl was driving home about 9:40 p.m.after a trip to a convenience store. Posing as a police officer, Baumgarte pulled the young driver over in his car, which was equipped with red and blue flashing lights. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Minister angered by queue jumping

'I don't care ... how rich you are,' says Matthews over reports athletes got shots

Flu Outbreak

Ontario Health Minister Deb Matthews is promising to investigate whether celebrity athletes jumped the queue for the swine flu shot while other groups are being forced to wait and the province's supply dwindles.

She shares the outrage sparked by reports that professional hockey and basketball players in Toronto got the shot while school-age children are still being told to wait their turn, Matthews said Thursday.

"I don't care who you are, how rich you are, how famous you are," she said.

"If you're not in the priority group, get out of the line and let the people who are in the priority groups get their vaccination."

Ontario, which is still expected to run out of the regular H1N1 vaccine at the end of the week, has enough supply to immunize 2.2 million people, which is intended for priority groups only, she said.

They include pregnant women, children between six months and five years of age, people under the age of 65 with chronic conditions, and those living in remote communities.

Deb Matthews: Investigation

A health employee in Alberta was fired after letting the Calgary Flames jump the swine flu shot queue, but Matthews wouldn't say what the consequences might be in Ontario.

The government expects flu-shot providers to respect Ontario's priority list, but there don't seem to be any hard rules that forces them to comply, she acknowledged.

"When it comes to the queue jumpers, that's one of the questions that I'm exploring right now," Matthews said.

Players and staff from both the NHL's Toronto Maple Leafs and the NBA's Toronto Raptors received the vaccine, but spokespersons for the teams say there was no preferential treatment.

Sens just wait

- Players for the Ottawa Senators haven't received the vaccine, said spokesperson Phil Legault.
- "We are waiting in line just like everyone else here in Ottawa," he said.
- "They'll wait in line until it's their turn."

Raitt's expenses spark probe call

CASH Liberals are demanding an audit of expenses claimed by Natural Resources Minister Lisa Raitt during her stint as president of the Toronto Port Authority.

Paul Szabo, the Liberal chair of the Commons ethics committee, added Auditor General Sheila Fraser on Thursday to the list of independent parliamentary watchdogs he has asked to investigate.

Reports allege Raitt signed off on her own expenses at least once — for a $3,000 trip to London, England — during her term as port president.

Toronto lawyer Michele McCarthy, a former chair of the port's board of directors, told a newspaper she refused to sign off on the trip, so Raitt signed it herself.

Szabo has asked Prime Minister Stephen Harper to grant Fraser a mandate to conduct a special audit of the port authority's operations during Raitt's tenure.

Watching the watchers

UrbanCompass

It's Ontario Crime Prevention Week. This year's slogan is "Prevention Pays," and an ounce of prevention might be worth a ton of cure.

Once a crime has been committed in Ottawa, after all, it seems it's often too late. There was some embarrassment this spring over Statistics Canada figures that ranked our police force the worst in urban Ontario for solving crimes. Our "clearance rate" of crimes resolved either with criminal charges or otherwise was 31 per cent, which put us in 17th place out of 17 cities in Ontario with populations more than 100,000.

I'm not quite sure where such a metric fits with Ottawa's image as a mecca for the "creative class," the highly educated knowledge workers that urban theorist Richard Florida sees as key to economic productivity now and in the future.

"The auditor general warns that federal co-ordination of police and other emergency services is poor to non-existent."

In his most recent book, Florida singles out diverse, livable Ottawa as well-placed in the global competition for such brainpower, so perhaps our criminal class itself is more creative — think dashing gay cat burglars, downsized Nortel geeks turned elite hackers — and our poor cops don't stand a chance?

It's perhaps too easy to be a smartass about this. Policing is hard, dangerous work, and isolated mistakes are often given more attention than a job that's well done most days.

Just this week in the Ottawa courts, for example, a judge chided officers for Tasering a woman they busted for drunk driving, and a man arrested for the murder of his wife on what appears to be flimsy evidence got the go-ahead to sue Ottawa Police Services.

At least when there are serious questions concerning the conduct of an Ottawa cop or OPP officer, the civilian Special Investigations Unit can step in and investigate. Not so with the RCMP, which also makes its home here, and has proven woefully inadequate at policing itself in cases like that of Robert Dziekanski, who died at the Vancouver airport after being Tasered, or Ian Bush, shot dead in RCMP custody. NDP MP Nathan Cullen has called for a civilian body to investigate such incidents.

Meanwhile, the auditor general warns that federal co-ordination of police and other emergency services is poor to non-existent, and National Defence headquarters says it wants to move its operations out of the downtown core for "security reasons." One could be forgiven for assuming it was located in the middle of the capital in the first place for security reasons — ours.

Perhaps when it finds its new secure, undisclosed location, National Defence will let us visit. We'd like to be safe, too.

How did grandma get on Facebook?

ModernLife

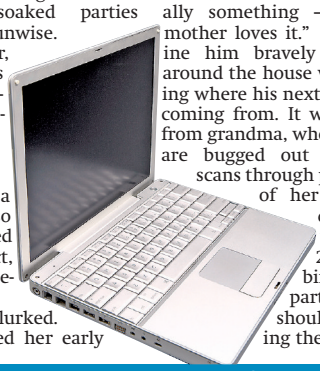
For years my parents have yearned to know every little thing about their grandkids' lives. However, phone calls were unproductive. "Yes, yes, no. Bye grandma."

Emails were even shorter. "Luv u 2." So recently, I suggested my mom (not allowed to reveal age) get a Facebook account.

Sooner than you can say, "Grandma would like to add you as a friend on Facebook," grandkids were actually leaving their rooms and asking, "Do I have to add grandma on Facebook?"

My siblings and I shrugged. The kids reluctantly added grandma. Briefly, the thought fluttered through their minds that all those pictures showing 14 year olds hanging out in the park and getting into "mischief," 17-year-old band members performing in their underwear and university students attending thousands of beer-soaked parties might be unwise.

However, that was soon forgotten because grandma didn't download a picture, so she seemed and, in fact, was faceless.



But she lurked. I instructed her early on not to post on anyone's wall (Stuff like — Shouldn't you be doing your homework instead of posing with those scantily clad girls?) And she's been taking my advice. "I love it honey — it's like being a fly on the wall. What is a hook-up, anyway?"

Of course, it's taken over her life. My dad emails me, "Well, this Facebook is really something — your mother loves it." I imagine him bravely pacing around the house wondering where his next meal is coming from. It won't be from grandma, whose eyes are bugged out as she scans through pictures of her granddaughter's 20th birthday party. ("I should be doing the dishes, but I'd rather come in and check Facebook to see what's going on.")

It certainly provides a different view of her grandkids, but rather than tut-tutting she's keeping (grand) mum. Instead of being sucked in by those cherubic faces smiling in fake innocence across the Christmas dinner table, her new Facebook X-ray vision shows them to be the hellions they really are. Christmas stockings are more likely to be stuffed with hookah pipes, fake ID and gift certificates to rehab (for the older ones) this year rather than the traditional gloves and scarves.

But she's not complaining. That's because she's hit the (grand) motherlode.

November reminds us that Christmas is around the corner

Re: Reasons to love November (Nov. 2)

I believe my reason is the most important. November is when we get to start decorating for Christmas! The third week of this month is when my countdown starts and the lights and tree go up.

Not to mention all the other unnecessary treasures put on display that I've collected over the years to make my house more "merry."

Just thinking about unpacking those boxes makes me happy!

Lest we forget the freedoms that we have today

Re: Reasons to love November (Nov. 2)

Nov. 11 is one day you missed. It's a day in which we get to remember and honour the people, both men and women, who have given their lives so we can enjoy the freedoms we have today.

Freedom of the press, freedom to choose ones partner in life, freedom of religion, freedom to travel, and all the other luxuries that we take for granted on a daily basis.

Remembering these people should definitely put a smile on ones face.

Lest we forget!

JOHN BUFFETT, TORONTO

Fathers of Confederation chose monarchy for Canada

I have read the two articles in Metro (Nov. 3 and Nov. 4) written by Lawrence Martin and Paul Sullivan advocating abolishing the monarchy in Canada. Neither column has given even one example of stifling democracy in this country by our Queen or of her representatives, which is more than can be said for certain politicians.

The Fathers of Confederation were not pressured by the British government into keeping the monarchy when planning a constitution for the new country but freely chose the Crown. What is needed here now is education in our constitution and why we have a monarchy.

The monarchial system of government in Canada works well for the most part and I don't think it should be changed.

No problems with H1N1 vaccine: WHO

The World Health Organization says millions of doses of H1N1 vaccine have been given so far and no unusual side-effects have been seen. Dr. Keiji Fukuda, the agency's top flu expert, told a news conference in Switzerland on Thursday that 20 countries have started to administer the pandemic vaccine, which appears to be very safe. "We see no evidence at all that there is widespread occurrence of antiviral resistance," Fukuda told reporters.

Suspected shooter's blog investigated

The U.S. Army psychiatrist suspected of carrying out a shooting rampage at Fort Hood, Texas, had come to the attention of authorities six months ago because of Internet postings that discussed suicide bombings and other threats, law enforcement officials said Thursday.

The postings appeared to have been made by Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan, who was wounded during the shootings at the Army post that killed 12 soldiers and wounded at least 30 others.

A Fort Hood spokesman had earlier said Hasan was killed. The officials say they are still trying to confirm that Hasan was the author of the Internet postings. One of the postings that authorities reviewed is a blog that equates suicide bombers with a soldier throwing himself on a grenade to save the lives of his comrades.

"To say that this soldier committed suicide is inappropriate. Its (sic) more appropriate to say he is a brave hero that sacrificed his life for a more noble cause," said the Internet posting. "Scholars have paralled (sic) this to suicide bombers whose intention, by sacrificing their lives, is to help save Muslims by killing enemy soldiers."

Killings shaking Brits' faith in Afghan mission

AFGHANISTAN The deaths of five British soldiers gunned down by an Afghan policeman has shaken U.K. public support for the war in Afghanistan, intensifying debate about the human cost of the conflict and increasing calls for a pullout.

If British troops can't trust the Afghan colleagues they are supposed to be training, critics asked Thursday, how can they fight the Taliban? And where does it leave an exit strategy that depends on handing over control to Afghan forces?

The deaths dominated newspaper front pages, television news shows and radio phone-ins, even as the Ministry of Defence announced the death of another British soldier Thursday in an explosion in Helmand province.

Several newspapers used the same photo, of the bloodied flak jacket of one of the victims.

"I don't think we ever should have gone there," said Jane Cooke, 49, expressing an increasingly common view.

"There is an inner conflict going on there, and it's never going to be resolved."

Africa could split in two ... literally

Africa's eastern edge has begun to crack away along a 60-kilometre rift that appeared virtually overnight.

According to a new study, the continent will eventually split along a 5,000-kilometre line between Ethiopia in the north and Mozambique in the south. A huge new ocean will fill the gap between the resultant land masses. The surface fault in the arid, sparsely populated region of Afar in Ethiopia appeared over the course of 10 days in September 2005, according to seismologist Atalay Ayele of Addis Ababa University. At its widest, the so-called Afar Depression is roughly a football field across. At its deepest, it goes down 2 km.

Ayele described it Thursday "as the most exciting place on Earth" to study the large-scale seismic effects of tectonic shifting. Most faults this size appear beneath the oceans.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Million years

- The split is not expected any time soon. Ayele referred to a "geologic time scale" running to a million years. However, he said, "a series of volcanic events" might push that timetable up significantly, to a thousand years or so.

Polygamist convicted of sexual assault

TEXAS The first polygamist sect member to face criminal trial following last year's raid at the Yearning For Zion Ranch in West Texas was convicted Thursday of sexually assaulting an underage girl with whom he had a so-called "spiritual marriage."

Raymond Jessop, 38, didn't visibly react when the verdict was read after just more than two hours of jury deliberations. Free on bond during trial, he was immediately handcuffed and led to jail. Jurors were expected to return to court Monday to begin deciding his sentence on the child sexual assault conviction. He faces up to 20 years in prison. Lawyers in the case declined to comment on the verdict Thursday.

Jessop allegedly has nine wives. He also faces a bigamy charge, but that case is to be tried later. The girl in the assault case, now 21, was previously in a spiritual marriage with Jessop's brother before being "reassigned" to Jessop when she was 15, according to documents seized at the ranch. She became pregnant at age 16. Forensic experts who testified during the trial, which began with the largest jury pool in the small county's history on Oct. 26, said there was a nearly 100 per cent probability Jessop was the father of the woman's daughter, who is now four.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Indictments

- In all, 12 male members of the church sect have been indicted on charges ranging from failure to report child abuse to sexual assault since authorities raided the ranch last year.

News in brief

HEALTH CARE Throughout the debate about health-care reform in the U.S., Canada's system has often served as a punching bag for both Republicans openly swinging at it and Democrats ducking from suggestions of Canadian-style reform. This time the attack came from Dick Morris, a renowned political strategist, in an opinion piece entitled "Canada's Healthcare Disaster." Morris makes unsubstantiated claims that Canadian doctors are deserting the profession after "more than a decade of public health care with mandatory coverage." Unions "control the entire health-care process" in Canada, he added.

HONDURAS Efforts to create a unity government aimed at ending Honduras' political standoff appeared to be dragging past Thursday's deadline.

Abbas won't run for re-election in Palestine

Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas says he won't run for re-election in January, blaming the stalemate in peace negotiations with Israel for his decision not to run again. 'Black jail' guard admits rape

A guard at an unofficial jail in the Chinese capital has pleaded guilty to raping a young detainee, an activist said Thursday, in a case that has turned attention to "black jails," where a growing number of people seeking justice from the government end up.

The guard told a district court Wednesday he raped the 21-year-old student in August after she came to Beijing to ask the central government for help, local human rights activist Liu Dejun said.

Liu was not in court but was told of the guilty plea by people who attended the one-day trial. A verdict is expected within 30 days.

"He ruined my life," the woman told journalists after the trial session, the Beijing News reported Thursday.

The woman, from central Anhui province, had been expelled from college because of poor exam scores and wanted to ask the government to reinstate her. Thousands of Chinese come to Beijing every year to air complaints ignored by local authorities, but rights groups say hundreds are rounded up by provincial officials who fear the complaints may get them in trouble.

Oklahoma couple clip elephant on highway

ANIMALS It's not unusual to see a deer or a cow crossing Oklahoma's rural highways. But an elephant?

An Oklahoma couple driving home from church nearly slammed into a giant pachyderm that had escaped from a nearby circus late Wednesday.

Bill Carpenter, 68, said he swerved his SUV at the last second and ended up sideswiping the 29-year-old female Asian elephant on the highway in Enid, about 128 kilometres north of Oklahoma City.

The couple weren't hurt.

But the 2.5-metre, 4,500-pound elephant was being examined Thursday for a broken tusk and a leg wound. A local vet said it seemed to have escaped major injury.

Fled the circus

- The elephant had escaped from the Family Fun Circus at the Garfield County Fairgrounds earlier Wednesday, apparently after something had spooked it while it was being loaded into a truck.

TODAY'S HOMEWORK ASSIGNMENT: RESURRECT A SMALL TOWN.

At Carleton University, we like to give our classes real meaning. The Batawa - Carleton Initiative is one such example. Twenty-six of our students were given the rare opportunity to help revive the town of Batawa after it was ravaged by the closing of a shoe factory. It was the chance to re-imagine it completely and create a new sustainable community with a promising future. It's another example of our dedication to delivering an educational experience that's anything but textbook. We think you'll find this is one homework assignment that comes with extra credit.

Britain draws heat for testing refugees

Genetic check used to determine nationality

Britain is using genetic tests on some African asylum seekers in an effort to catch those who are lying about their nationality, drawing criticism from scientists and provoking outrage from rights groups.

The United Kingdom Border Agency launched the pilot project in September amid suspicions there might be a large number of asylum applicants lying about their home countries. An agency spokesman said Britain was the only country using genetic tests in this way.

Experts, however, say the tests are based on flawed science and there's no way genetic swabs can provide meaningful evidence regarding nationality.

Concerned about potential fraud, the Bush administration launched a pilot DNA testing project in 2007 to vet applicants to a program that allows family members of African refugees already in the United States to join them.

The project, which wrapped up in March 2008, found an extremely high rate of fraud — 87 per cent — among applicants claiming to be related to each other, the State Department said, and the resettlement program was suspended until those concerns could be addressed.

The U.S. does not use genetic tests to try to prove nationality.

U.S. Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano said in London on Thursday that the U.S. has other ways of probing a person's country of origin, such as testing language skills.

"I haven't thought about it," she said of the British attempt to match DNA to nationality. "We have a variety of ways we can use when we think someone is not telling the truth."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Testing process and applicants

- Authorities said the testing would involve a voluntary mouth swab or hair or nail sample. The applicants would then be free to decline.
- So far, the tests are being used only on people who claim to be from Somalia, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Kenya, Uganda and Sudan.

Goals lowered in Europe climate talks

ENVIRONMENT With the U.S. Congress still struggling to agree on sharp cuts in greenhouse gases or how to fund them, European officials said Thursday they were now striving for a political agreement instead of a new treaty to allow the U.S. and other rich nations to make commitments that are not legally binding.

The revised thinking was an implicit admission of defeat: the two-year timetable for crafting a landmark treaty will miss its deadline, and that failure threatens to deepen the distrust between rich countries and poor nations reeling from drought and failing crops caused by persistently warmer weather.

The treaty had been due to be completed in December at a 192-nation conference in Copenhagen, Denmark.

European and U.N. officials are now suggesting a political deal, rather than a legal accord, that would rely on commitments from both wealthy and developing countries. Industrial countries would commit to firm targets for reducing emissions and allocating funds for poor countries, while developing countries would specify their plans for low-carbon growth.

INSURANCE Manulife Financial Corp. slid to a loss in the third quarter as lower corporate bond rates pulled down profits and it logged charges related to its actuarial assumptions.

The Toronto-based insurance giant said Thursday it booked a loss of $172 million down from year-earlier profits of $510 million or 33 cents per share.

The results were affected by a $1.2-billion pretax charge, worth $783 million after taxes, on changes in actuarial assumptions used to value its policy liabilities. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rose-coloured employment data?

ECONOMY The surprisingly sharp turn-around in Canada's labour market this summer is raising eyebrows among analysts that the most timely and critical barometer of economic strength may be sending false signals.

Scotiabank senior economist Derek Holt, among others, is leery of the Statistics Canada labour force survey that has shown 58,000 new jobs created in August and September, when according to the same government agency, Canada's economy was flat in July and contracted by 0.1 per cent in August.

"Why would employers be adding so much to their payroll when the economy on balance still stinks?" Holt asks. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Opel workers walk off job to protest GM

Fearing widespread layoffs, thousands of Opel workers walked off the job across Germany Thursday to protest General Motors Co.'s decision to abandon the unit's sale to new owners.

MICHAEL PROBST/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An Opel worker carries a coffin past the historic Opel main entrance in Ruesselsheim, Germany Thursday. Opel employees walked off their jobs to attend a mass rally at the automaker's headquarters, protesting GM's decision to abandon the unit's sale to new owners the workers hoped would preserve jobs.

Their indignation was echoed by Russian and German leaders, who both questioned GM's decision. Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin claiming GM exhibited an "arrogant attitude" in abandoning months of negotiations.

Workers at Opel's headquarters in Ruesselsheim vented their frustration and anger at a rally.

"Our trust (in GM) is now zero, and that is the heart of the problem," Klaus Franz, the head of Opel's employee council, told the workers.

Organizers estimated that 10,000 workers attended while police put the figure at 6,000. Smaller rallies were being held at factories in Bochum, Eisenach and Kaiserslautern.

German politicians were still furious over the switch. Chancellor Angela Merkel's office said she had discussed it with President Barack Obama, who told her he had no involvement in Tuesday's decision by the board of the majority government-owned company.

Merkel and Putin were strong backers of the planned sale of a majority in Opel to a consortium of Canadian auto parts maker Magna International Inc. and Russian lender Sberbank.

The decision was an embarrassment to Merkel, coming hours after she had addressed the U.S. Congress. German officials swiftly demanded a restructuring plan from Detroit and vowed to recover by Nov. 30 a $2.2-billion US bridge loan granted to keep Opel afloat as a buyer was sought.

German workers worry GM will make even more cuts to return Opel to profit than Magna would have. Still, the decision won a cautious welcome from union officials in Britain and Poland, where workers had feared possible cutbacks in a Magna takeover. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fakes a real business

Chinese knockoffs have some surprising buyers

Thousands of foreign buyers flock to Guangzhou, China at this time of year for the country's biggest trade show, searching for factory owners who will make their products cheaply and won't rip off their designs.

Then, they slip across town to malls loaded with fake Prada purses, Rolex watches and Tod's loafers — all sold at a fraction of the original price.

"I've been in these stores where when you ask for knockoffs, they take you into a back room with shelves lined with fake handbags," said a footwear buyer from Milwaukee, Wis., who only identified herself as Kathy.

"Many buyers ... show you their rival's product and ask if you can copy it." Alyn Wong

The shopping shows how the piracy problem is much more complex than it is usually portrayed. It's not just about creative foreign companies who are struggling to keep copycats from stealing their ideas. Often, the foreigners behave in a way that encourages the theft of intellectual property.

"Many buyers come here and talk about intellectual property rights, but then they'll show you their rival's product and ask if you can copy it," said Alyn Wong, a sales representative for a luggage company in the eastern province of Fujian. "It seems kind of contradictory. But that's the way the market works."

U.S. consumer sales make gains in October

RETAIL American consumers, enticed by cooler weather, early holiday discounts and an improving economy, spent a little more in October, handing the retail industry its second consecutive monthly sales gain after more than a year of declines.

Even affluent shoppers, who had been tight with their purses since the financial meltdown ballooned last year, spent more for designer duds.

Merchant figures releasted Thursday showed that shoppers still were not splurging. But the improving figures and tone of the reports all pointed to sales momentum, encouraging as the industry heads into the holiday shopping season.

Spezza pots winner in OT

NHL RESULTS

Ottawa 3 Tampa Bay 2 (OT)

Jason Spezza's first goal of the season came at a great time for the Ottawa Senators.

Spezza scored the winner on a power play at 4:17 of overtime as the Senators defeated the Tampa Bay Lightning 3-2 on Thursday.

Spezza, a 30-goal scorer in each of the past three seasons, had been held goalless through his first 10 games this season before firing a slapshot past Niittymaki with Lightning defenceman Mattias Ohlund in the penalty box for holding. Spezza added a pair of assists in his return after missing two games with an upper-body injury.

Daniel Alfredsson and Mike Fisher also scored for the Senators (7-4-2), who ended a two-game losing streak. Pascal Leclaire made 18 saves to earn the victory.

Alex Tanguay and Steven Stamkos each scored power-play goals for the Lightning (5-5-4), who fell to 1-1-1 on their four-game road trip. Antero Niittymaki stopped 26 shots in defeat.

After meeting three times in the last three weeks, the intensity between the teams is clearly growing with every game. There were a number of scuffles after the whistle, and the second period featured a pair of fights.

Things heated up after Chris Neil drilled Victor Hedman behind the net. Before Neil could get his balance, Downie jumped in and the two exchanged punches. Downie was given an instigator penalty on the play.

Ottawa's Matt Carkner and Tampa Bay's Ryan Craig, who was back in the lineup after clearing re-entry waivers, also exchanged blows as the period ended.

No penalties for Paul, Rondo fight

NBA The NBA will not penalize Chris Paul or Rajon Rondo for an incident between them after a recent game in Boston.

Paul pursued Rondo toward the Celtics' locker-room and was blocked by Boston assistant coaches after the Celtics' 97-87 victory over New Orleans on Sunday night.

The point guards had been assessed matching technical fouls in the second quarter after they got tangled up under the basket.

League spokesman Tim Frank also said Thursday the league won't take action against Paul from a game at New York on Monday.

Underdog takes on MMA legend

BARRETT HOOPER
for Metro Canada

FEDOR He's got the physique of a professional bowler not a brawler, the disposition of a dead fish and a name you can't pronounce. But make no mistake, Fedor Emelianenko is the most exciting and dangerous fighter on the planet. He's the Babe Ruth of mixed martial arts, and on Saturday night he will headline the biggest MMA fight of the year, Strikeforce: Fedor vs. Rogers, airing live and for free on CBS.

Fedor Emelianenko

Brett Rogers

Fedor, as he's known, has lost just once in 31 fights, and that was nine years ago. Among the fallen are four former UFC heavyweight champs, three current UFC heavyweight contenders and one 7-foot-2 giant. He's beaten them with punches and he's beaten them with grappling. All but a handful of his fights have been in Japan, where he's regarded as something between a rock star and Godzilla.

With dollar signs in their eyes, the UFC tried desperately to sign Fedor three months ago, envisioning a showdown with their musclebound champion, Brock Lesnar. But the inscrutable Russian chose the lesser-known Strikeforce and fans reacted the way people did when the Red Sox sold Ruth to the Yankees, with anger and disappointment.

As hazardous jobs go, fighting Fedor ranks up their with ice road trucker and bomb defuser. The man who will play Beowulf to Fedor's Grendel is Brett Rogers, a soft-spoken mountain of muscle with a Mr. T mohawk and sleep in his fists. Rogers is undefeated in 10 fights but until four months ago he made his living changing tires. Punching people unconscious was merely a hobby.

Then, Rogers knocked out former UFC champ Andrei Arlovski in just 22 seconds, which is almost three minutes faster than it took Fedor to knock him out.

Now, Strikeforce has set up a fight even Hollywood couldn't script, a mythic invincible Russian versus an all-American underdog with the proverbial puncher's chance of winning. Come to think of it, this was a movie, Rocky IV. While Fedor is obviously Ivan Drago, it just remains to be seen whether Rogers is Rocky Balboa or Apollo Creed.

CFL announces player award nominees

CFL Montreal Alouettes quarterback Anthony Calvillo is among the team nominees named yesterday for the Canadian Football League's outstanding player award.

Calvillo, who won the award last year, is up against Hamilton receiver Arland Bruce III, Toronto running back Jamal Robertson and Winnipeg cornerback Jovon Johnson in the East.

Calvillo has completed 72 per cent of his passes for 4,639 yards with 26 touchdowns and just six interceptions.

Calgary Stampeders running back Joffrey Reynolds, Lions receiver Geroy Simon, Saskatchewan quarterback Damian Durant and Edmonton slotback Fred Stamps are up for the honour in the West.

Reynolds has run for 1,389 yards and 11 touchdowns.

Winnipeg defensive tackle Doug Brown and Toronto linebacker Kevin Eiben (outstanding defensive player, outstanding Canadian) and Edmonton guard Patrick Kabongo (outstanding offensive lineman, outstanding Canadian) are the only multiple nominees.

Ontario needs PanAm win

Toronto is set to make its pitch to host the 2015 Pan American Games. If it finds the strike zone, high performance athletics in Canada could hit one out of the park.

"This city needs to be inspired," says Olympic gymnast Alexandra Orlando, who brings an athlete's voice to the final presentation in Guadalajara, Mexico. Toronto steps to the plate last after Lima, Peru and Bogota, Colombia. "If we're successful we could change the face of sport in our country."

Beyond the dreams of the politicians, who have ulterior motives, the second biggest international multi-sport showcase could help inspire Canada's largest urban population to become participants rather than spectators.

The bid calls for 17 municipalities in the Golden Horseshoe to stage 36 sports and for 16 days to be a playground for more than 5,000 athletes from the 42 member nations of the Pan American Sports Organization.

It's a gathering double the size of the winter Olympics.

"It could change a lot of lives," stresses Orlando, the winner of seven Pan Am medals, including three gold at the two Games she competed in at Santo Domingo 2003 and Rio de Janeiro 2007. "There is no permanent environment to develop summer Olympic excellence right now. This could provide it."

The Toronto 2015 bid calls for a cycling velodrome and 15,000-seat athletics stadium in Hamilton as well as an aquatics centre and Institute of Sport in Toronto. Boxing will be east in Oshawa, whitewater canoeing north in the Haliburton Highlands and rowing south in St. Catharines.

The total budget for infrastructure and legacy is $700 million. It's an ambitious undertaking — a necessary step before Toronto can make another serious bid for the Olympics.

Then there's the real up side to this Pan American proposal.

If it flies it might help change the culture in communities where swimming pools, tracks and high school gymnasiums are closing and where kids are glued to a litany of pro sports on TV instead of becoming active competitors.

"The benefits from these Games would be immeasurable," figures Alexandra Orlando. "They will lay the foundation for the next generation of Canadian Olympians."

Orlando will make that pitch in both Spanish and English in Mexico and hope Toronto can score its biggest sporting triumph in recent memory.

Everyone knows Canada's biggest city desperately needs a win.

Scott Russell is the Host of CBC Sports Weekend seen Saturday afternoons. He has covered professional and amateur sports including nine Olympic games and numerous world championships.

Minister vows flu shot investigation

Flu Outbreak

HEALTH Ontario Health Minister Deb Matthews vowed yesterday to investigate whether celebrity athletes jumped the queue for the swine flu shot while other groups are being forced to wait as the province's supply dwindles.

She said she shares the outrage sparked by reports that professional hockey and basketball players in Toronto got the shot even though the province doesn't have enough yet to vaccinate school-age children.

"I don't care who you are, how rich you are, how famous you are," she said.

"If you're not in the priority group, get out of the line and let the people who are in the priority groups get their vaccination."

Ontario is still expected to run out of the regular H1N1 vaccine at the end of the week due to Ottawa's dramatic supply slowdown, she said.

The province has enough vaccine to immunize 2.2 million people, which is intended only for the estimated 3.4 million Ontarians who fall under the province's high-priority groups, she said.

She said she doesn't yet know how the pro athletes with the Toronto Maple Leafs and the Toronto Raptors got the shot, or whether it was obtained through Medcan, a private clinic that received 3,000 doses of the vaccine.

"All of our professional health-care providers — the ones who are administering the vaccine — are working under exactly the same rules," Matthews said.

"It doesn't matter if it was through a private clinic or through a doctor's office or through one of the public health unit clinics. The priority groups remain the same."

A health employee in Alberta was fired after letting the Calgary Flames jump the swine flu shot queue, but the minister wouldn't say what the consequences might be in Ontario.

Some players and staff from both the NHL's Leafs and the NBA's Raptors received the vaccine, but spokesmen for the team said there was no preferential treatment.

- Players for the Ottawa Senators haven't received the vaccine, said spokesman Phil Legault. "We are waiting in line just like everyone else here in Ottawa," he said from Ottawa. "They'll wait in line until it's their turn."

American Watney takes lead in Singapore tourney

GOLF So much for that notion that American golfers don't travel well.

The first World Golf Championship in Asia opened Thursday to a leaderboard filled with Stars&Stripes, led by wide-eyed Nick Watney and his 8-under 64 that tied the course record at the HSBC Champions and including, as always, Tiger Woods.

Watney got more excitement than he expected when he went to Shanghai's metropolis in a cab that weaved through six lanes of cars on a three-lane highway. He felt far more safe at Sheshan International Golf Club, where he kept it down the middle and close to the flag. Watney made an accidental eagle and ran off four straight birdies while building a two-shot lead.

"It was just one of those days where everything was feeling really good, so I wasn't too jumpy," Watney said.

Ryan Moore wasn't about to pass up a trip to China when he qualified by winning his first PGA Tour event in August. With a new equipment deal in place, he shot a 6-under 66 to join Shane Lowry of Ireland and Martin Kaymer of Germany, who is second in the Race to Dubai and facing a big week at this $7 million US event.

Woods was the star attraction again, although it is demanding as ever. Standing composed over his opening tee shot, he flinched all the way through his swing and let the three-wood drop at impact upon hearing the shutter of so many cameras, inside and outside the ropes. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Renault unsure about F1 return

MOTOR SPORTS Renault CEO Carlos Ghosn says the automaker will announce whether it will stay in Formula One racing before the year ends.

Renault's reputation was recently damaged by a crash scandal that led to team principal Flavio Briatore's indefinite ban from the sport.

They're back! Just don't mention Cool Runnings

VANCOUVER 2010 Games

BOBSLED More than two decades later, the story hasn't changed for the fabled Jamaican bobsled team.

A handful of young men from the Caribbean island nation, all physically blessed with speed and power, embark on an Olympic odyssey. Unable to quickly fulfil their quest in track, they put their disdain for ice and snow aside and become intrigued by bobsledding, where a lack of funding and access to the right equipment impede their progress and threaten to derail their hopes.

You've heard this before, right?

Only this isn't the Disney movie that offered a somewhat-fictionalized version of the 1988 Jamaican team and its path to the Calgary Games. This is very real for a new generation of Jamaican sledders, a group that cringes at any Cool Runnings parallels and insists that not only are they serious about their sport — but that maybe, just maybe, they're good enough to surprise at the Vancouver Olympics.

"People do not understand: This is my passion. This is our passion," said Hannukkah Wallace, the team's driver. "I really want to get an Olympic medal. It's all I've ever wanted. I really, really, really need it. And if they ask me about the movie, I tell them, the movie was a comedy, but our crashes our real."

So against all odds, here they go again.

Get ready, Vancouver: The Jamaicans are coming.

"I think a lot of people might believe that it's sort of an amusement park ride to the Olympics," said Stephen Samuels, who represents the Jamaican Bobsleigh Federation. "I don't know how to describe it to you, other than this. This is their life. They are serious athletes."

Yanks turn attention to World Series No. 28

The sign men were out bright and early at the Yankees minor league complex, sticking vinyl strips with a fresh, white "27" over the "26" that had been up on the board for nine, long years to mark the team's total of World Series titles.

Wind caused a few problems at the Himes complex in Tampa, Fla., but eventually the numbers were posted along with a new "2009" in what had been an open blue space below "2000."

"It's a ton of joy," manager Joe Girardi said on WFAN radio later in the day. "There's a sense of relief because you know that you could rest your mind a little bit for a while."

Turmoil and turnover ceased in Yankeeland, at least for the moment. A 7-3 victory over Philadelphia on Wednesday night had brought the title back to the Bronx, etching the names of Alex Rodriguez, Hideki Matsui, Johnny Damon, CC Sabathia and others into the team's long list of champions.

"Every World Series victory is special, but this one is especially sweet coming in the first year in our new home," owner George Steinbrenner said in a statement. "This group will become legendary — similar to the 26 world championship teams that preceded them."

Even though the clubhouse was still wet with champagne Thursday and the triumphant parade through the Canyon of Heroes was a day away, attention already was turning to the future.

"There's a sense of relief because you know that you could rest your mind a little bit for a while."
Joe Girardi, Yankees manager

Girardi said he was likely to switch from uniform No. 27 to No. 28 next year, signifying the next quest.

But which players will the Yankees add for their title defence? Are the likes of John Lackey and Matt Holliday in the mix?

"Basically, you have got to get after it," general manager Brian Cashman said Thursday. "It pretty much comes pretty quick. I'll be in Chicago with the other GMs on Monday. Two trades already have taken place."

Matsui, the World Series MVP, is eligible for free agency as is Andy Pettitte, who beat the Phillies in Games 3 and 6. So is Johnny Damon. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

2 out of 3 ain't bad: Phillies set new goal

BASEBALL Charlie Manuel was heading to the interview room when he spotted a reporter walking alongside.

"Two out of three, that's what I told them," Manuel said.

Sounds like the Philadelphia Phillies and their manager already have set their goal for 2010.

The Phillies fell two wins short of becoming the first NL team in 33 years to win consecutive World Series titles, losing to the New York Yankees in six games. Looking ahead to next season, they see plenty of reasons for optimism.

"We love to play baseball ... We will be back."
Charlie Manuel, Phillies manager

"We've got a good team, and we love to play baseball," Manuel said. "We will be back."

The team has a young nucleus of star players who are under contract for at least one more season. Chase Utley, Ryan Howard, Jayson Werth, Jimmy Rollins, Shane Victorino, Cliff Lee, Cole Hamels, J.A. Happ and Joe Blanton are all 30 years old or younger. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lincecum was fined a total of $622 US for driving at 74 m.p.h. in a 60 m.p.h. zone, and for possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia. Both are misdemeanours.

NBA The Sacramento Kings say leading scorer Kevin Martin has a hairline fracture in his left wrist. An MRI taken Thursday revealed a non displaced hairline fracture of the navicular bone in Martin's left wrist. The team says treatment options are currently being evaluated.

John Cusack stars in Roland Emmerich's latest end-of-the-world film, 2012.

Earth destroyed, again

Disaster movie veteran Emmerich returns with 2012

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

When speaking with Roland Emmerich, a director synonymous with big-budget disaster films, the first question that comes to mind is what, exactly, does he have against the planet earth?

"Nothing," he insists, sitting comfortably in a lodge in Jackson Hole, Wy., just miles from where he filmed much of his latest movie, 2012 — opening next week — was filmed.

"Sometimes you destroy what you love."

After raining destruction down upon our planet through aliens (Independence Day), giant monsters (Godzilla) and global warming (The Day After Tomorrow), Emmerich admits he had reservations about taking on another project of that kind.

"I thought, 'Should I do another disaster movie? Another end of the world movie?'" Emmerich said. In the end, he relented. "I'm drawn to disaster movies because in disaster movies there are no rules, really. As long as you tell story lines that all converge at the end."

2012 opens next week

He also enjoys slipping his own agenda into big-budget popcorn films, following the belief that a spoonful of CGI-enhanced destruction will help the progressive ideas go down.

"There's always this need to have some sort of a philosophical or political aspect in my movies," said Emmerich, who also admits he can be too subtle. "In Independence Day, everybody thought it was blatantly patriotic, and nobody saw that it was the first African-American, WASP and Jewish guy working together to save the world. They didn't see all the little jokes we put in about race and religion."

For Emmerich's next feature, he's leaving the world of catastrophe and special effects behind, focusing instead on a very un-Emmerich subject: The question of who actually wrote the works of William Shakespeare.

Anonymous, set to begin filming in March, is a story the director has been interested in for quite some time — he first purchased the script eight years ago before developing it further with writer John Orloff.

"I found it fascinating," Emmerich said. "We had to make sure this movie's not a new version of Amadeus," he explains. "This has to be more than that. It has to be a political movie.

"I'm casting right now, and I get all these compliments from these famous English actors, and they all want to be in my movie," he says with a laugh. "When Vanessa Redgrave says it's the best script she has read in the last four, five or six years, that tells you something."

Laughs arise from Goats' absurdity

The Men Who Stare at Goats

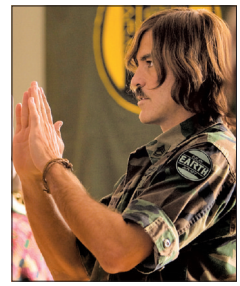
Director: Grant Heslov
Stars: George Clooney, Ewan McGregor, Jeff Bridges
Classification: 14A
Rating: ⊕⊕½

ANNE BRODIE
for Metro Canada



George Clooney plays a psychic soldier in The Men Who Stare at Goats.

REVIEW Despite a popular notion, not every George Clooney movie can be Oscar material. This one isn't, but it is an often wickedly funny poke at U.S. military might.

Grant Heslov based the film on The Men Who Stare at Goats, Jon Ronson's examination of "the apparent madness at the heart of U.S. military intelligence" and comes up with an unexpectedly complex tragicomedy and Clooney makes it palatable.

The film details psychic warfare techniques allegedly developed in an official secret unit called the New Earth Army, falling in the you'll-never-believe-this category. No performance, not even Clooney's, can match the story's fascinating absurdities.

It's a desert road romp that follows Lyn (Clooney) and Bill, a reporter (Ewan McGregor) on a mysterious mission in the war-torn Middle East. Lyn is apparently an undercover operative with a past and Bill is hungry for a story and keen to tag along. Lyn tells Bill that he is ex-New Earth Army and reveals his "powers" of cloud bursting and reading the future.

According to Lyn's yarn, paranormal applications in the military began when a Vietnam veteran turned hippie named Django (Jeff Bridges) declared war on war and invited soldiers to love the universe.

Experiments lead to the formation of the New Earth Army of "psychic soldiers" steeped in new age philosophy and psychotropics who developed the abilities of remote viewing, walking through walls, killing with a touch, stopping a goat's heart by staring forcefully, reading minds — strategies meant to induce shock, awe, and capitulation in the minds of the enemy.

Men is surreal, tragic, and funny. Clooney is as charismatic and compelling and helps us believe a dicey premise. McGregor is OK, cast unsubtly as Bill.

The Men Who Stare at Goats is an interesting film trapped inside something being sold as a mass market comedy.

Don't believe The Fourth Kind

The Fourth Kind
Director: Olatunde Osunsanmi
Stars: Milla Jovovich
Classification: 14A
Rating: ½

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

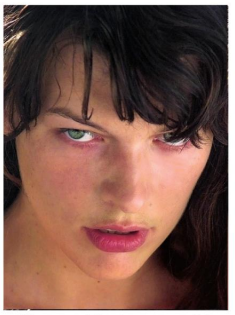
In the first shot of The Fourth Kind, Milla Jovovich emerges from fog-shrouded woods to inform us that the film we are about to see is based on real events, and that we should make up our own minds about its contents based on the evidence.

The spectacle of a movie star unabashedly pleading our indulgence is admittedly disarming, and things only get odder from there, with a cut to footage of the film's director Olatunde Osunsanmi, interviewing Dr. Abigail Tyler, a psychiatrist seemingly recovering from some severe trauma.

This sets up a conceit whereby the film alternates between conventional narrative sequences with Jovovich playing Tyler — whose troubles begin when she take sup her late husband's study of bizarre goings-on in Nome, Alaska — and allegedly documentary footage from that period, including her interviews with patients wrestling with repressed memories of alien abductions.

A word to the very impressionable (and based on the comments on the film's IMDB page, there are a lot of you): There is no Dr. Abigail Tyler.

The increasingly implausible video-camera interludes are just so much post-Blair Witch wankery, and while the gimmick has made for good marketing, it hampers the onscreen product. The few effectively staged shocks can't make up for the unintentional hilarity of some scenes.



Milla Jovovich plays a psychiatrist dealing with strange occurrences in The Fourth Kind.

It's a cold, cold Christmas

A Christmas Carol
Director: Robert Zemeckis
Stars: Jim Carrey
Classification: STC
Rating:

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Jim Carrey plays Scrooge and many other characters in the latest version of A Christmas Carol.

I've never understood the appeal of motion capture animation. Sure, Robert Zemeckis may have mastered the technical trickery of making the real Tom Hanks look like an animated Tom Hanks in 2004's The Polar Express, but I just couldn't help thinking, "Why didn't you just film the real Tom Hanks?"

The question is raised again in the case of A Christmas Carol, in which Zemeckis hooks Jim Carrey up with sensors to capture his skillfully-portrayed six roles (including Ebenezer Scrooge) only to animate said characters into a 3-D form that essentially strips the life from their eyes.

As if that wasn't problematic enough, the Oscar-winning director chose one of the world's most iconic stories to reproduce with this fancy, but ultimately alienating technology.

For those uneducated in the ways of Scrooge, he is a curmudgeon wrapped up in his own selfish misery until visited by a series of spirits who show him his influence on those around him.

Indeed, it's a tale that has resonated with folks ever since Charles Dickens conceived it in 1843 for its wholesome themes of family, redemption and selflessness which all reflect the exact opposite of Zemeckis' main accomplishment with this remake: self-indulgently grandstanding his own command of motion-capture animation.

Don't get me wrong — the effects are simply stunning. But after the initial novelty of the digital wizardry wears off and you seek the warmth and heart that's allowed the original story's longevity, you'll more likely discover this cold, unnecessary undertaking will leave you muttering "bah-humbug" on your way home.

Director thinks inside The Box

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

"I wanted to try something much smaller and more manageable."
Richard Kelly

The Box is a thriller centred around a couple's dilemma.

FEATURE Director Richard Kelly earned instant cult status with his bizarre and beloved debut Donnie Darko in 2001. This week he returns with The Box, a low-key thriller about a married couple (Cameron Diaz and James Marsden) who are given a strange box by a man with a rotting face (Frank Langella).

They are told that if they press the button in the box they will be given a million dollars, but someone somewhere in the world will die. It's the type of creepy and deceptively simple premise that would have made a classic episode of The Twilight Zone. Which is why it should come as know surprise that the film is based on a short story by Richard Matheson, a longtime scribe for that show and childhood influence on Richard Kelly.

The Box hits theatres today

"The Box was a story that I was lucky enough to stumble upon as a child," Kelly told Metro. "I think I was 10 or 11 years old when I first read it and then I was able to get the movie rights years later."

Though obviously a story that fits into Kelly's unique and dark style of filmmaking, it's also a far simpler tale than his previous movies. According to Kelly, The Box represented a deliberate attempt to scale back his ambitions.

"Coming off of something as elaborate and complicated as Southland Tales I wanted to try something much smaller and more manageable," revealed Kelly. "It was kind of refreshing for me to be able focus on a more intimate story about a married couple and also to try and embrace the aesthetic of 1970s filmmaking." Kelly decided to set his story in the 1970s world of his childhood, even basing the main characters on his parents. "It was a way to make the story emotionally relevant to me and to pay tribute to them and their experiences," admitted Kelly. "Plus this is the kind of movie they would love. They love Alfred Hitchcock films and thrillers."

Kelly was also able to wrangle some surprising talent to score the movie by hiring three members of The Arcade Fire to compose the music. "I met them at one of their concerts at the Hollywood Bowl. I gave them the script and a CD of Bernard Hermann's score for Vertigo," said Kelly. "It wasn't a traditional relationship with a composer, but it was one of the greatest collaborations that I've ever had with another artist."

When pirates ruled airwaves

'60s Britain, outlaw radio spread the love in comedy

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Bill Nighy doesn't believe in the '60s. Not literally, of course.

Born in 1949, the popular actor who's starred in everything from Underworld to Pirates of the Caribbean spent his youth in the prominent decade. But a nostalgic hippy, he's definitely not.

"I don't have a particular nostalgia for that era," said Nighy during a recent interview in L.A. "I don't like the phenomenon of people my age telling younger people that it was better to be young then because it wasn't.

"It was just like always – some of it was good, some of it was bad. There were some dreadful trousers and there were some good trousers."

Nighy may not be terribly sentimental about his youth but perhaps that's because he'd rather look to the future — specifically to next week's release of Pirate Radio, a '60s-set ensemble comedy that tells the true story about a group of British deejays who get around the government's ban on rock 'n' roll by broadcasting from boats harboured in the North Sea.

Directed by skillful filmmaker Richard Curtis (Love Actually), the film harkens back to the wistful era when men wore thick sideburns and radio rocked with bands like The Troggs.

The comedy recalls the tone of Robert Altman's earlier works so it wasn't surprising to find out Curtis gathered his cast to watch Altman's 1970 hit M*A*S*H prior to filming — a bonding experience that wasn't universally appreciated.

"I didn't finish. I watched about 40 minutes and I said to Richard, 'I'm going to bed,'" laughed co-star Nick Frost (Shaun of the Dead). "Sometimes on a brand new television and you watch a film, it looks ungraded and flat. That's what was happening on M*A*S*H and I couldn't get past it."

Despite being completely unsentimental about the '60s, Bill Nighy stars in Pirate Radio.

"Richard (Curtis) is a believer ... he's also got a wicked sense of humour."
Bill Nighy about Pirate Radio director

Even with Frost's lack of participation, Curtis definitely succeeded in creating a unique bond amongst an ensemble that also includes Philip Seymour Hoffman. It shouldn't be shocking since the director appears universally loved by his cast.

"Richard is a believer," said Nighy, who also starred in Love Actually. "He doesn't make romantic comedies because he thinks it will manipulate the money out of your wallet, he does it because he wants to spread the word ... he's also got a wicked sense of humour and is incredibly bright so I think that probably helps too."

More to war than dodging bullets

Nazi zombies go "Ein! Zwei! Die" in the Norwegian horror flick Dead Snow.

Earlier this year Quentin Tarantino's unconventional war film Inglourious Basterds played fast and loose with historical facts and raked in over $100 million US at the box office.

Now George Clooney is looking for the same kind of success with his offbeat look at modern warfare, The Men Who Stare at Goats. These films join the list of quirky genres like military sci fi, war comedies and musicals like M*A*S*H and South Pacific and even Nazi zombie films, that use war as a backdrop for the main story.

Most war movies focus on men but 1944's musical comedy Rosie the Riveter is a lighthearted romp about the women who stayed behind, doing shift work at munitions factories.

Better known in the all-singing-all-dancing war field is South Pacific. Inspired by James Michener's Tales of the South Pacific, the film's love story is set amid the conflict in the Pacific islands between American and Japanese soldiers. Buoyed by the popularity of songs like Some Enchanted Evening, South Pacific ran for almost five years at the Dominion Theatre in London.

Five for Hell is a cockeyed look at American GIs during the Second World War. The story of infiltrating enemy lines to steal documents that could end the war is by-the-book, but the film certainly isn't.

It's probably the only war film to feature miniature trampolines as tools to storm a Nazi base, a scene, one critic wrote, that resembles "a glorious circus act." Rent it for the trampolines; watch it for Klaus Kinski's portrayal of the evil Nazi officer.

Speaking of evil Nazis how about Dead Snow, a Norwegian flick about Nazi zombies? Love the advertising tagline: "Ein! Zwei! Die!"

Even stranger than undead Nazis is the Nazisploitation subgenre. There are, alarmingly, lots of these films, but the most famous is Ilsa, She Wolf of the SS. Filmed on the set of Hogan's Heroes this is one polarizing movie. Fans of 1970s exploitation fare love the lurid storyline about Commandant Ilsa's vicious attempts to prove that women can withstand more pain than men.

Most people don't. One writer said, "Despite a lot of competition, this is perhaps the most poisonous thing passing itself off as a movie that I've ever seen."

And finally, more traditional than Ilsa or Dead Snow, but still on the fringe, is La Grande Illusion, a 1937 French film starring Erich von Stroheim, often credited as the first anti-war movie.

De-Timbaland-izing Chris Cornell album

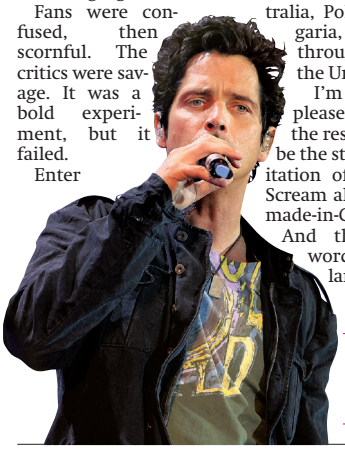
SoundCheck

Obviously, Chris Cornell felt he needed to make a Big Statement. After a quarter-century of playing the grunge game — with Soundgarden, Temple of the Dog, Audioslave, a couple of solo records and a James Bond theme — he wanted to try something different.

For reasons known only to him, he decided to hook up with Timbaland (Destiny's Child, Jay-Z, Jennifer Lopez, Rihanna and dozens more) to help him with this makeover.

He didn't give Cornell a makeover as much as he took over. The Scream album was pure Timbaland, full of electric R&B grooves, phat beats and backing vocals from people like Justin Timberlake. It was not what anyone expected (or wanted) from the voice behind Black Hole Sun and Rusty Cage. We should have taken the hint given in the cover art, which featured Cornell smashing a guitar.

Fans were confused, then scornful. The critics were savage. It was a bold experiment, but it failed.



Enter Michael Friedman, a Canadian ex-pat working in LA licensing and placing music in TV shows and movies. He thought there was some good Soundgarden-esque stuff buried in all that production.

"I heard some Black Hole Sun greatness deep within some of the songs," he told me, "I also got to know Chris as a friend. I ended up calling Jordan Zadorozny (of the Canadian indie band Blinker the Star and co-writer of songs with Courtney Love and friend of Fleetwood Mac's Lindsey Buckingham)." I flew him down to L.A. and had him listen to some of the tracks in hopes that he could remix them somehow."

The first track to be de-Timbaland-ized was Never Far Away. The messy, forced funkishness was stripped away and guitars were reintroduced. The result is a proper Chris Cornell song, re-imagined, decluttered and grunged-up.

I was able to secure permission to stream this new version of the song at ExploreMusic.com.

Reaction has been swift. Comments came in by the dozens. The story continues to spread across the web and around the world. We've seen lots of visits from Russia (especially St. Petersburg), Chile, Australia, Poland, Brazil, Bulgaria, Mexico and through Canada and the United States.

I'm told Chris is pleased and excited by the response. Could this be the start of the rehabilitation of Chris Cornell's Scream album? If so, it's a made-in-Canada solution.

And there's been no word from Timbaland. Yet.

Maxime Morin, who performs under the moniker Champion, is touring in support of latest album Resistance.

Resistance spreads

Electronic act Champion embraces rock, adds new vocalist

BRIAN COULTON
for Metro Toronto

"In life, if you don't go forward, you go backward."

The adage is familiar to Maxime Morin, advice commonly bestowed on him by his father while growing up in Québec.

It was with that maxim in mind the Montréal-based DJ, who performs under the moniker Champion, approached his latest album Resistance. The follow-up to 2004's Chill 'Em All certainly does reflect progression in the electronic artist's oeuvre, with heavier rock influences and wholly different vocal fronting.

But forward movement didn't come easy to Morin.

"When I started Resistance, after the first six months, I really felt I was going backward. I wasn't evolving, challenging myself, or going anywhere other than where I was," he said. Stuck in the musical mindset he'd perfected over three years touring Chill 'Em All, Morin trashed the initial tracks he recorded for Resistance and went into seclusion, an act he said was key to start recording as himself, without external influences.

"When you isolate, you give yourself the ability to be a loser, to cry. Musically speaking, you allow yourself to compose bad songs." Morin said he was able to purge the scraps and make strides by acknowledging his personal weakness. "We are always trying to avoid it in our lives, with our ego, trying to be good, tough and come at the world in our best fashion. But weaknesses are in us all the time."

To wean weakness, Morin focused on his strength: live performance. Knowing most people discover his music from Champion's energized live sets — always more rock-focused than his albums — Morin aimed to capitalize on the style.

"Rock is a song but it's also a structure. Rock is lyrics-oriented," he said.

"In techno we have long tracks with no chorus. It's very primitive and I love it very much. That was a challenge for me, to compose music that was oriented on the lyrics and not the music or repetition."

Rock is also fixated on the frontman. So while Morin's decision to replace Chill 'Em All's unflappable baritone vocalist Betty Bonifassi (who's since made her own mark with Montréal electronic duo Beast) with Pierre-Philippe "Pilou" Côté may seem genre-discrepant, he justifies the switch on the basis of emotional equivalence.

"At the first concert I did with Betty, people were telling me, 'Oh, she looks like a junkie on stage. That's awful'," said Morin, "That's not awful, that's her! To look at her being so weak, that's gorgeous. I like that."

That's how Morin said he knew audiences would latch on to Pilou. "He can put his soul into it. He is intense, he's not lying and he's all there. If you're fake and trying to be rock stars or cheap pop crap, of course you have to be good liars or actors. We're not."

"That was a challenge for me, to compose music that was oriented on the lyrics and not the music or repetition."

Jets Overhead ready for takeoff

Victoria band blends driving rhythm with meandering, fuzzy guitars and soaring vocals

ROB MCMAHON
for Metro Canada

There's music that goes well with visuals, and then there's music that is visual.

Post-rock, minimal techno and prog-rock tend towards that visual quality — as does the work of Victoria-based space-rockers Jets Overhead. And as lead singer Adam Kittredge explained, visualization works as much for the band as it does for listeners.

To focus in studio sessions, the band came up with a visual concept for their newest album, No Nations: A giant fountain.

"The drums are like the cement foundation (of the fountain). A jet underneath it is pumping the water up, and the main stream of water ... is the bass guitar," he explained. "The vocals are when the water reaches the point where gravity hits, and falls down and spreads out. We wanted to keep the vocals central, on top of the mix ... Then the different effects splay out — all the fills, guitar, keyboard lines splashing down."

Listening to songs like Heading for Nowhere and Tired of the Comfort, the visual metaphor makes a lot of sense. Driving basslines anchor epic vocal harmonies from Kittredge and his co-lead singer (and wife) Antonia Freybe-Smith.

The image also helps explain the band's songwriting process, during which they work to capture spontaneity in carefully crafted structure. No Nations came together over weeks of extended jams recorded in the band's practice space. Kettridge gathered up this digital hoard, trimming some 80 tracks worth of material from hours of experimentation.

"I gleaned the best nuggets of aural ecstasy (from our jams), distilled them and passed them around," he said. "In band meetings and over email and phone, we talked about how to take those nuggets and use them in a verse-chorus-verse structure ... Then we went back to the recording studio again, put them together and imposed more structure."

The end result is a series of songs that blend driving rhythm with meandering, fuzzy guitars and soaring vocals. And while the epic builds, album title (No Nations), vintage keyboard tones (courtesy of an ARP Solina), and millennial-themed lyrics suggest a grand theme, that wasn't the case.

"Our lyrics are stream of consciousness — what we were thinking in the moment. They reflect our universal thoughts, quandaries, worries, philosophies," said Kettridge. "A theme sort of emerged out of song titles and lyrics, but it wasn't all set out. This is not an album about globalism or anything like that, but maybe subconsciously that kind of theme emerged."

In Concert

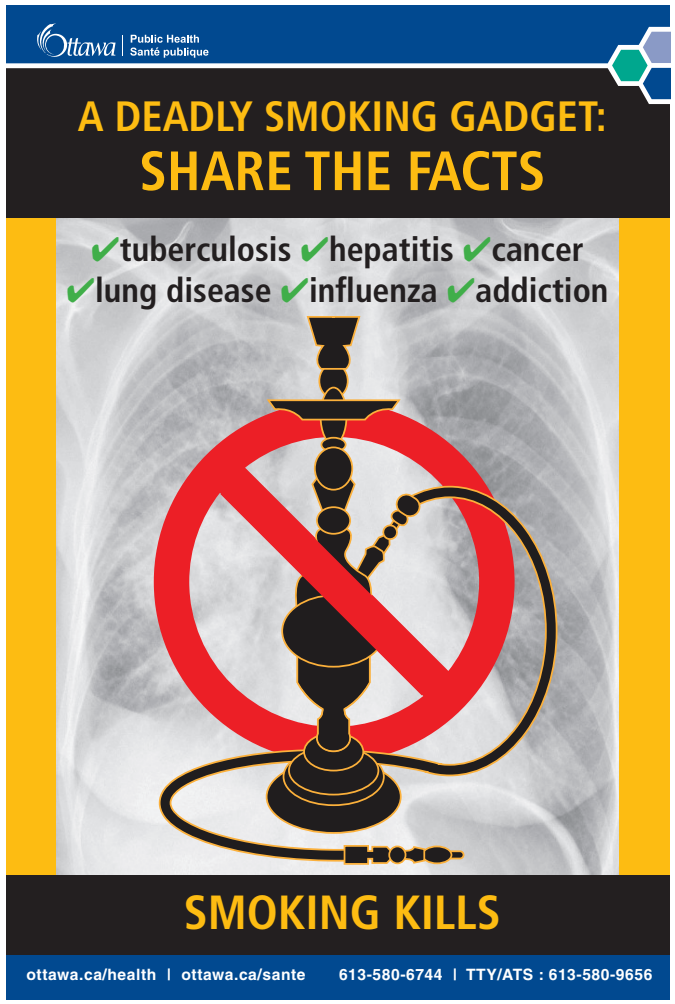
Jets Overhead is currently touring Canada in support of latest album No Nations.



Elvis Stojko set to release new single

PEOPLE Two-time Olympic silver medallist Elvis Stojko releases the first single from his new album today, called Let Me Be The One.

The album by the seven-time Canadian figure skating champion, entitled 100 Lifetimes, will be released later this fall.

A statement from Stojko's says the album represents "several years of work in the studio."

Stojko's father was a professionally trained tenor and the release of 100 Lifetimes marks the start of the skater's music career. The songs will be featured as part of a musical figure skating show titled Rock the Ice to be held January 3rd in Peterborough, Ont.

Kristina Matisic, left, and Anna Wallner are the hosts of the new style and beauty makeover series called Beauty Call on W Network.

Beauty on a budget

The Shopping Bags hosts team up for new makeover series

IAN JOHNSTON
for Metro Canada

Shopping guru Kristina Matisic says knowing how to shop doesn't mean you always make the right decisions.

"We definitely know how to shop for clothes," says Matisic, co-host of the new beauty-on-a-budget series Anna and Kristina's Beauty Call, premiering Tuesday on the W Network.

"But we don't always know style. And I think our new show is all about our search for style."

Best known for her long-running The Shopping Bags series, Matisic is once-again teaming up with co-host Anna Wallner for this new show, which aims to help viewers pull off beauty and style on a budget.

To do this, Matisic and Wallner will test every beauty product imaginable, talk to experts, and offer up a makeover to a fashion victim. However, unlike other "makeover" shows, Beauty Call will feature nothing but "willing" participants.

Kristina and Anna's Beauty Call premieres Tuesday night on W

"All our candidates volunteered," laughs Matisic. "But we're not out to change their whole life — just a specific look for a specific time."

For instance, in the opening episode the duo hosts help a woman find the right "professional look" for work.

However, things don't always go smoothly on Beauty Call. Matisic and Wallner's choices in fashion often come under the critical eye of experts, including Lisa Tant, editor-in-chief of Flare magazine.

"We definitely put our taste under the microscope on this," she says.

Since The Shopping Bags debuted in 1999, the TV landscape has exploded with dozens of shopping, fashion and makeover-related series of varying quality and interest. Matisic says what has always set her work apart from the others is her on-screen chemistry with co-host Wallner.

"People just like to watch our relationship and the differences that we have," says Matisic, who shares a background in television news with Wallner.

"But while we want to give information to people, we also want to entertain. To give them stuff they can use but do it in a fun way. That's what we always tried to do with Shopping Bags. And that's what we do with Beauty Call."

Matisic and Wallner now have their own company, Worldwide Bag Media, to handle their current and future projects.

"One goal is to get into producing stuff that we're not in," says Matisic. "And not about shopping."

Big Bird still huge as Sesame Street marks 40th anniversary

TELEVISION Big Bird is leaving Sesame Street!

That's what he decides on the Sesame Street season opener. A rapping real-estate agent pitches him on migrating to a new habitat ("habitat," the episode's Word on the Street). After sizing up a beach and a swamp for his new habitat, Big Bird chooses a rain forest.

But then he comes to his senses with a musical number.

"Sesame Street is my habitat!" he sings. "Sesame Street is my home!"

Indeed, Big Bird — that towering, yellow-feathered 6-year-old — has been calling Sesame Street home for four decades, ever since the show premiered on Nov. 10, 1969.

Now, as it marks its 40th anniversary on Tuesday on PBS (check local listings), he remains an essential member of the flock.

He is still brought to life by Caroll Spinney, who also plays trash-can denizen Oscar the Grouch.

Hand-picked by Muppeteer Jim Henson, Spinney was 35 when Sesame Street began. He turns 76 the day after Christmas. In his dressing room at Kaufman Astoria Studios in Queens, where the show is taped, he was pondering an existential question not long ago.

"If you didn't know when you were born, how old would you think you are?" he mused. "I can apply that to Sesame Street's longevity: It seems like years, but I'd NEVER guess 40!"

Maybe that's because the self-renewing Sesame Street is forever young.

Late night newcomers

Sykes, Lopez bring new comedy to white men's domain

In the blink of an eye, late-night TV is shifting from a white men's club to the start of a rainbow coalition.

Wanda Sykes' weekly Fox comedy show debuts 11 p.m. EST Saturday, followed by George Lopez's four-night-a-week talk show on TBS, starting 11 p.m. EST Monday. They join The Mo'Nique Show on BET.

Lopez is counting on an audience hungry for something different — as in the first Hispanic to host a nighttime talk show on a major network, cable or broadcast.

Sykes is the first black late-night host since the late 1990s, when celebrities Earvin (Magic) Johnson and Keenan Ivory Wayans tried and failed to follow in Arsenio Hall's successful 1989-94 footsteps.

"There's a huge percentage of people not watching late-night TV at all," Lopez said, figuring that the shows headlined by hosts including David Letterman, Conan O'Brien and Jimmy Kimmel draw from roughly the same audience pool.

For people of colour, the actor and comedian said, "I don't think a lot of their needs are met with the current talk shows. I would pull a different audience."

Shari Anne Brill, an analyst with media-buyer Carat USA in New York, echoes Lopez's assertion.

"There is a huge, growing multicultural population in this country, and the current late-night fare doesn't really take them into account," she said.

But neither Lopez nor Sykes are talking about practising exclusionary TV. Lopez's ABC sitcom drew a cross-section of viewers, and Sykes said she expects her show to attract the same mixed crowd she gets at her standup appearances.

"Young, old, male, female, all races, gay, straight. I love the audience that I draw," Sykes said.

She rebuts the idea she got the job because of her gender, ethnicity or sexual orientation (the actress-comedian, who appears on CBS' The New Adventures of Old Christine, came out as gay in 2008).

"I do understand the importance of being on a late-night talk show as a black, gay woman. But I've been at this for 20 years. I don't think they (networks) were saying, 'Hey, it would be fun to get a black woman on late-night. Who fits that role?'

"I got this show in spite of being a black lesbian," she said, adding that viewers will tune in to see her or Lopez and not a type.

"It's all driven by the host. It's not what you're getting from a minority, it's us," Sykes said.

She doesn't see an "Obama effect" in the sudden late-night diversity, given that she was approached before the election of the first African-American U.S. president. But Lopez said his interest was piqued as he campaigned for the Democratic candidate.

CHRIS PIZZELLO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wanda Sykes' new late night show, The Wanda Sykes Show, debuts Saturday. Along with a new nighttime George Lopez talk show, the Sykes program is hoping to draw a cross-section of viewers.

"There is a huge, growing multicultural population in this country, and the current late-night fare doesn't really take them into account."
Shari Anne Brill, analyst with Carat USA

"Being with Barack for a year and seeing the people and how their eyes and their faces filled with hope for him, for this country ... and, on a very smaller scale, to have a show that is fun and can galvanize people and bring them together was appealing," he said.

The two shows, as sketched by their hosts, will take different approaches.

Lopez promises to bring "the party back to late-night," signalling a looser, hipper hour in the tradition of The Arsenio Hall Show, said analyst Bill Carroll of media buyer Katz Television in New York. Sykes is planning Bill Maher-type panels with both lighthearted and serious discussion of politics and culture as part of her mix.

Singer Bono performs with his band U2 at the Brandenburg Gate in Berlin on Thursday. The concert, celebrating 20 years since the Berlin Wall fell, was in conjunction with the 2009 European MTV Awards.

Beyonce's triple win, U2 plays tribute at MTV Awards

MUSIC Berlin loves Beyonce.

The R&B superstar scooped up three wins Thursday at the 16th annual MTV Europe Music Awards, including trophies for best female, best song for Halo and best video for her No. 1 smash, Single Ladies (Put a Ring On It).

When she won the best video award, she thanked Jay-Z — who just happens to be her husband — for "putting a ring on it."

Jay-Z was also honoured, winning MTV Europe's best urban act — though he said he looked forward to the day when "all those awards come down" that it's just music, plain and simple, adding "Danke schoen" (thank you in German) before leaving the stage.

Other winners included Green Day, the established trio whose punk-influenced tunes have garnered it a fan legion worldwide. The trio won the award for best rock act while U2, which earlier Thursday performed a six-song mini-set in front of the German capital's iconic Brandenburg Gate, won best live act.

U2 frontman Bono paid tribute to Berlin, which marks the 20th anniversary of the collapse of the Berlin Wall on Monday, for its grit and determination. The band recorded its LP Achtung Baby in the city and drew inspiration from reunification to write its oft-played single One.

German pop quartet Tokio Hotel won best group and played a set.

1 Up/In The Loop

DVD Make it a double bill next week. Both are colourful comedies on the surface — Up about a widower making the trip of his life in a balloon-propelled house, In The Loop about the bumbling idiocy of Anglo-American politics. But shades of black creep into the animated adventure — a new high point for Pixar. And Loop maybe the darkest satire of the year. Get ready for the laughs to stick in your throat.

2 Mad Men Season Finale

TV Will Don and Betty Draper get a divorce? Will Peggy finally leave Sterling Cooper? Will Pete Campbell go back to work? Will they solve the Kennedy assassination? Too many questions (OK, we all know the answer to the last one). One episode. You know what to do.

3 New Super Mario Bros. (Wii)

GAME Rock Mario old school. The new title is a throwback to the '80s arcade classics that made jumping, stomping baddies and collecting mushrooms such a cool thing. Nintendo has also listened to what fans have been clamouring for decades — four people can now play on-screen at the same time.

4 Fido Film Awards

HONOUR Four-legged screen stars are vying for these awards, billed as the canine equivalent of the Oscars. Nominees include the animated dog stars of Bolt and Up, and the titular mutt in Marley and Me, among others. The winners will be chosen by a panel of British film critics and announced at the end of this month in London.

5 Ford County: John Grisham

BOOK A collection of short stories is commercial suicide for most writers. Not so for the bestselling author of legal thrillers. Grisham's imagined vignettes of small-town attorneys and their clients have started a publishing price war. Both Wal-Mart and Amazon are offering competing deals for pre-orders. And with Christmas around the corner, it will surely make its way to millions of gift lists.

6 Lego Movies

TREND Got a creative block? Turn to Lego. Films made from the kiddie favourite are all the rage on YouTube these days. There's Lego Star Wars, The Lego Ultimatum (with a smashing action sequence from the Bourne Series) ... the list goes on. Most impressive of them all is a re-imagined trailer for The Dark Night.

7 Phrazes for The Young: Julian Casablancas

ALBUM Most of his band buddies have done it. Now it's his turn. The Strokes' front man's debut solo effort maybe a mixed bag but admit it, it's next the best thing to having a full-fledged album from the New York hipsters. And if this effort is any indicator, expect some techno-country and synth-gospel in the next Strokes release.

Don't get blinded: Rihanna

Rihanna said Thursday that she regrets returning to ex-boyfriend Chris Brown after he left her bruised and battered during a February assault, warning other women facing domestic violence to not let themselves be blinded by love.

"It's completely normal to go back. You start lying to yourself," the 21-year-old singer said on Good Morning America in her first TV interview following the beating. "I'll say that to any young girl who is going through domestic violence: 'Don't react off of love.'"

Brown, 20, was arrested Feb. 8, hours after he was accused of beating Rihanna after the couple attended a pre-Grammy Awards party. He later pleaded guilty to felony assault and a judge ordered Brown and Rihanna to stay away from each other.

IDA MAE ASTUTE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In this image released by ABC, Diane Sawyer, left, interviews singer Rihanna about her relationship with ex-boyfriend Chris Brown in New York. The interview aired on the morning program Good Morning America on Thursday and will also air Friday on the prime time news program 20/20.

In the interview, Rihanna, who is no longer with Brown, said she was ashamed to go back to him after the attack.

"That's embarrassing — that's the type of person I fell in love with. So far in love, so unconditional, that I went back," she said. "That's not what I want to teach people."

The attack occurred in Los Angeles' Hancock Park neighbourhood as Brown drove a rented sports car. A Los Angeles police detective described a brutal attack in a search warrant affidavit filed in the case, stating Brown hit, choked and bit Rihanna and tried at one point to push her from the car. A photo of her bruised face was circulated on the Internet.

In her interview with Good Morning America, Rihanna said she soon realized that, as a role model to young women, her returning to Brown sent the wrong message.

"When I realized that my selfish decision for love could result in some young girl getting killed, I could not be easy with that part. I couldn't be held responsible for telling them, 'Go back,'" she said.

"I didn't realize how much of an impact I had on these girls' lives until that happened," she added. "It was a wake-up call for me, big time, especially when I took myself out of the situation."

ABC will air more of the interview on Friday's Good Morning America and then Friday evening on the news magazine 20/20.

Beyonce not welcomed by all

SEX PARTY As Egypt gears for pop diva Beyonce Knowles' first performance in North Africa, Islamic conservatives are branding her show an "insolent sex party" that threatens the Muslim nation's "social peace and stability."

On giant posters plastered across the Egyptian capital advertising the Friday evening concert, Beyonce sports a revealing, flame-covered outfit and grips a set of motorcycle handlebars extending from her hips — a sharp contrast to Cairo streets, where most women wear the traditional Muslim headscarves.

Alex and Kate celebrate late

BASEBALL BASH After his team won their 27th World Series — beating the Philadelphia Phillies 7-3 — New York Yankees slugger Alex Rodriguez and Kate Hudson hit NYC hot spot 10ak, along with Rodriguez's mom, Lourdes Navarro, and his sister, Suzy.

They celebrated alongside Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter and his girlfriend Minka Kelly. Rodriguez, 34, and Hudson, 30, "got there at 2 a.m., but Kate left after a half-hour while A-Rod stayed close to 5 am.," a source tells usmagazine.com. "Minka and Derek seemed really happy, as did they all, and didn't leave until 5 as well."

Since meeting Rodriguez this past May, Hudson has followed him closely during the winning season, attending games in Miami and Toronto.

At Yankee Stadium Wednesday night, she and dad Kurt Russell cheered on (along with Spike Lee, Donald Trump, Regis Philbin and Mary J. Blige, who sang the national anthem).

Although she denied engagement talk in the December issue of British Elle, Hudson is more than smitten with her beau, Us Weekly recently reported. Us also reported that Hudson has been mellowing out Rodriguez, a notorious egomaniac. METRO NEWS SERVICES

Stripper claims sex fling with Fergie's hubby

RAUNCHY RUMOURS The new issue of Us Weekly has more details on Josh Duhamel's alleged fling with an Atlanta stripper, usmagazine.com reports.

Nicole Forrester — a 34-year-old single mother-of-two — previously said on The Bert Show on Atlanta's Q100-FM that they "had lots of sex" at a hotel in Atlanta. Forrester's lawyer, Romin Alavi, tells the new Us Weekly, "They fell asleep together, and he kept waking her up to have more sex."

During the night, Forrester claims, Fergie's name came up just once: "After he told me his real name, I asked, 'Are you Fergie's husband?' And he was like, 'You know what you know.'"

A lawyer for Duhamel strongly denies the stripper's claims — and wife Fergie, 34, is standing by her man, Us Weekly reports. METRO NEWS SERVICES

Metro Recipe of the Day

Yogurt-marinated Chicken

INGREDIENTS:

1/2 cup (125 ml) fat-free yogourt
3 garlic cloves, minced
2 tbsp (25 ml) lemon juice
1 tbsp (15 ml) canola oil
1 tsp (5 ml) sugar
1 tsp (5 ml) chili powder
1 tbsp (15 ml) minced fresh ginger
1/2 tsp (2 ml) salt
1/2 tsp (2 ml) ground cumin
6 bone-in chicken breast halves

METHOD:

1. In large resealable plastic bag, combine yogurt, garlic, lemon juice, oil, sugar and seasonings; add chicken. Seal bag and turn to coat; refrigerate 1 to 8 hours or overnight.
2. Coat grill rack with non-stick cooking spray before starting grill. Prepare grill for indirect heat. Drain and discard marinade.
3. Grill chicken, covered, bone side down over indirect medium heat 2 minutes. Turn; grill 25-35 minutes longer or until juices run clear.

ARIES ♈
MARCH 21-APRIL 20
Even an Aries is allowed to get it wrong now and again so don't get angry with someone simply because they point out where you are going wrong.

TAURUS ♉
APRIL 21-MAY 21
It might be wise to take what a work colleague says as the very opposite of what they mean. Sometimes you have to act on the worst case assumption.

GEMINI ♊
MAY 22-JUNE 21
Sit down, put your feet up and let others do the running around for a change. The Sun's transit of the work and wellbeing area of your chart may be encouraging.

CANCER ♋
JUNE 22-JULY 22
No matter how sure you are of your own abilities you cannot possibly do everything alone and what happens today will encourage you to open up.

LEO ♌
JULY 23-AUG 23
Not everything is what it seems at the moment, most likely because you have placed your trust in someone who has been playing games behind your back.

VIRGO ♍
AUG 24-SEPT 22
It's not often you let your emotions get the better of you but there will be times today when you find it very hard not to scream out loud.

LIBRA ♎
SEPT 23-OCT 23
You know what needs to be done and you know that it must be done, so why do you still hesitate to act? Could it be you are having doubts?

SCORPIO ♏
OCT 24-NOV 22
No matter how much others may curse and shout and hurl insults in your direction nothing they say can possibly hurt you, so don't be intimidated.

SAGITTARIUS ♐
NOV 23-DEC 21
Keep your thoughts to yourself today, especially if you are one of those Sags who tends to talk at a rate of knots and give too much.

CAPRICORN ♑
DEC 22-JAN 20
What appears to be a setback early in the day will have you jumping for joy by the time the Sun goes down, so don't let that frown get stuck on your face.

AQUARIUS ♒
JAN 21-FEB 18
If you are happy with your life the way it is, that's fine, don't change a thing, but if you want to make changes now is the time.

PISCES ♓
FEB 19-MARCH 20
This is an extremely lucky time for you, so why the feeling of impending doom? It's most likely just a holdover from a time when you were not so fortunate.

This day in history

1861: American Civil War: Jefferson Davis is elected president of the Confederate States of America.
1913: Mohandas Gandhi is arrested while leading a march of Indian miners in South Africa.
1944: Plutonium is first produced at the Hanford Atomic Facility and subsequently used in the Fat Man Atomic bomb dropped on Nagasaki, Japan.
1971: The United States Atomic Energy Commission tests the largest U.S. underground hydrogen bomb, code-named Cannikin, on Amchitka Island in the Aleutians.
